One of the important things for human beings to live meaningfully is the ability to think. We are fortunate to be given highly-developed brains. It would be a shame if we always take what we are told for granted without doubting or criticizing. The French philosopher Descartes said, "I think, therefore I am." A person who never thinks is like a person who never lives.

The purpose of learning is for not only the knowledge itself but also how to obtain knowledge, which can only be done by in-depth thinking. Don't wait for people to tell us the answers. Go find them ourselves. Use logic. Besides, no matter what we find, from where we find it, we should always keep in mind that these answers may not always be right.

6. ( ) What do we learn from this article? (5%)
(A) The most important part of a human body is the brain. (B) Everybody has a brain, therefore everybody knows how to think. (C) We human beings have brains which enable us to think, and we should make the best use of them. (D) Descartes is the greatest philosopher in the history.
7. ( ) According to the article, which of the following is true? (5%)
(A) We should take what we are told for granted. (B) We should always be ready to doubt or criticize.
